Calling all faculty!

The staff of the Swedenborg Library is committed to providing great service to our community. We are especially interested in helping faculty members enhance the educational experience of their students, and in supporting scholarly inquiry on campus and beyond.

Now, information on all of the library resources available to faculty members can be found on a new page of our website. This is a one-stop guide with details, how-tos, and contact information for the many different ways the library can assist you in your teaching and research. We can:

- provide resources for preparing curriculum and course materials

- train students in information literacy
- offer meeting spaces for group projects and informal classes,
- give subject-specific or general reference and research assistance, and
- deliver access to print and electronic books, articles and databases through our collections and interlibrary loan service.

We can also help you discover or make the most of the many new digital applications and classic organizational tools that are available today.

Introducing Gwynne Haladay

I graduated from Bryn Athyn College in 2006 with a Bachelor's in History. The following fall, my soldier, Stephen Haladay, proposed to me. He was on mid-tour leave from Iraq. We got married a month after he came home, and we moved across country four times our first four years together. We lived in Colorado, Georgia, California, and back here. Every time we moved, we took our sweet time and explored many historical or silly road-side (or not so road side) attractions. Even now we love to go on road trips with our kids, Natalya (age 5) and Dimitri (age 3).

While living in Georgia, I received the opportunity to work in the library on post. It was there that I discovered that libraries were my calling. It is my hope to one day go back to school to get a Masters in Library Science. I am grateful to be back at work surrounded by books!

Gwynne joined our staff in July. You'll see her mainly during evening hours and Sunday afternoons at the circulation desk. She also works in technical services.

Welcome, Gwynne!
